The 2008 LAMA annual meeting was held November 14, 2008 in The Audubon Room at Loyola University’s Danna Center in New Orleans. Members turned out to discuss group business (see minutes on page 9) and listen to presentations and panels that highlighted the diverse archival interests throughout the state.

Mark Cave, Curator of Manuscripts and Oral Historian at The Historic New Orleans Collection, presented “Through Hell and High Water: Katrina First Responders Oral History Project” at the annual meeting. The project is part of an ongoing effort to tell and preserve the stories of Hurricane Katrina emergency personnel. (Photo courtesy of Neil Guilbeau)

Hurricane Katrina first responders, especially the New Orleans Police Department and the New Orleans Fire Department.

According to Cave, the NOFD records, per a confidentiality agreement with THNOC, will remain restricted for 25 years from the date of the interview due to the fact that many NOFD individuals are critical of the department’s leadership in the oral histories. The NOFD is also using the histories to compile an “after action” assessment report to be released at a future date.

Cave said that the oral histories cannot be protected from a court ordered subpoena and as a result it has been difficult to garner the full cooperation of the NOPD, as many officers and the organization’s leadership are extremely defensive about actions taken and the events surrounding Katrina. Cave noted that the phenomenon of “Parallel Provenance” has also been an issue. In conducting these oral histories, Cave noticed several in-

LAMA REPOSITORY DIRECTORY NOW ONLINE

The directory of repositories holding historical materials in Louisiana is now available online. The database includes the information published as a web page in the 1990s and presents it in a new searchable format. The directory currently resides on the developer’s server, ready for live testing. Readers are encouraged to test it, understanding that the actual data contains many errors, such as missing repositories, misnamed repositories, repositories that have disappeared, wrong telephone numbers, bad spelling, etc.

Errors in the data or “bugs” in the program should be reported to Elizabeth Dow. LAMA anticipates a general cleanup of the data in the directory as the second phase of this transformation.

The directory’s home page has two links in

HILL SPECIAL COLLECTIONS ACQUIRES WILLIAM C.C. CLAIBORNE ARCHIVE

The LSU Libraries Special Collections recently acquired a small but important William C.C. Claiborne archive that contains very useful sources on the territorial post at Natchitoches, relations with the Creole French and Spanish and Native Americans in the Natchitoches area, and efforts to establish American rule and governmental structure in territorial Louisiana.

The bulk of the eighteen item collection dates from 1805, but documents from 1805 to 1812 are included. It is comprised primarily of letters from and affidavits taken by Dr. John Sibley, Justice of the Peace at Natchitoches and U.S. Indian Agent. Sibley’s letters are newsy and descriptive, and they provide both a sense of the danger and uncertainty on the ambiguous border between Spanish Texas and Louisiana and local attitudes toward the new American government, so recently established in New Orleans.

For example, two affidavits forwarded by Sibley describe instances of “Spanish depredations” against citizens in which they took horses and goods. Additional affidavits record Natchitoches residents’ experiences living at and knowledge of the location of “ancient” French posts and Caddo settlements, apparently in an attempt to identify lands useful for further settlement. Sibley addresses topics from the need to regulate weights and measures to disputes about how to handle runaway slaves, how national politics are playing out locally, and the sense of those in the “Interior of the Territory” that they are being neglected in favor of New Orleans.

In addition to the Sibley letters, the collection includes miscellaneous documents related to Claiborne’s family, a letter from Claiborne to his father recommending Gen. James Wilkinson (whom he describes as having served his country with fidelity), and two letters from Captain Edward Turner, Civil Commandant of the District of Natchitoches.

Turner’s letters further illustrate the uneasy relations between the Creoles and the Americans. He reports the Creoles’ “wait and see” attitude about embracing the Americans, with them apparently hoping for the territory to be taken by the Spanish, and the role religion played in the mingling (or not) of the two populations.

This brief description gives only a hint of the rich sources in this collection. Though the documents are few in number, their writers were articulate, politically savvy, and, luckily for us, eager and able to convey a sense of the challenges of their duties and of the place in which they found themselves. For additional information on this acquisition, contact Tara Laver at tzachar@lsu.edu.

stances where differing accounts were often given by officers and firefighters of higher and lower rank, and discrepancies emerged between the oral histories and official departmental records.

The panel for “Jewish Louisiana” consisted of Catherine Kahn, Archivist at the Touro Infirmary Archives, Irwin Lachoff, Associate Archivist at Xavier University Archives, and Mary Linn Wernet, Head Archivist and University Records Officer at Northwestern State University of Louisiana.

Kahn spoke about Judah Touro and the settlement of Jews in New Orleans. According to Kahn, Touro was the second Jewish settler in New Orleans. He became a recluse after he was wounded at the Battle of New Orleans and all of his papers were burned at his death. Kahn also discussed a collection of meeting minutes for the Touro Infirmary board and hospital registers dating from 1854-present. They have been organized in an Access database, which allows researchers to search by a patient’s name, disease, date, etc. According to Kahn, these will eventually be transferred to Archon, which will allow for the display of related finding aids.

Lachoff discussed the development of congregations, and Orthodox and Conservative sects in New Orleans and Metairie. Lachoff said that modern scholarship on Jewish life in New Orleans needs to emphasize how integrated Jewish individuals were in the larger civic associations and fabric of the city. Jews were not just merchants, but also sugar planters, businessmen, musicians, architects, social activists and philanthropists.

According to Lachoff, the state of Jewish community records varies between institutions. For example, the Jewish Community Center holds records dating back to the 1920s and they were spared. Unfortunately, despite being raised 15 feet, Temple Beth Israel’s records were destroyed. One of Tulane’s major record collecting focus continues to be Jewish community records; they hold papers from four synagogues, prominent rabbis, the Jewish Federation of New Orleans, and the National Council of Jewish Women.

Wernet concluded the discussion with information on Jewish history and archival sources in Northern Louisiana. According to Wernet, the Cammie G. Henry Research Center in Natchitoches holds a significant number of Jewish collections cataloged by name. Several collections predate the Civil War, indicating a richer Jewish heritage for the region than many researchers might expect.

The third and final panel discussion was entitled “Intern-al Medicine: Optimizing the Experience of Student-Workers,” and was presented by Howard Margot and Aimee Everett from THNOC, Neil Guilbeau from Nicholls State University, and Bruce Turner from the University of Louisiana-Lafayette. The panel discussed internship experience from both the student and supervisor perspective. According to Margot and Turner, the parameters, goals, and objectives need to be well-established on each side in order for the internship to be productive.

COMMENTARY: NEW ARCHIVES POLICIES UNDER A NEW ADMINISTRATION?

The election of Barack Obama was in many ways a repudiation of the previous administration’s adherence to secrecy and political expediency. Change, accountability, and transparency became buzzwords in a campaign that raised expectations for a new approach to governance.

But what does this mean for those in the archives and records professions? Though it’s still very early in the new administration, the initial indications are favorable if still a bit unclear. On the one hand, Obama has reassured the importance of vital records legislation by revoking Bush’s executive order limiting access to presidential records and by firmly committing to openness and promptness in the execution of FOIA requests.

On the other hand, he has continued the Bush administration’s attempt to block a lawsuit requiring the recovery millions of emails, previously believed to be lost.

It will be interesting to see who Obama selects for the U.S. Archivist job (see page 9), and how much support the administration will throw behind pending legislation for PAHR – not to mention archives and records-related initiatives under the aegis of the NHPRC, IMLS, Save America’s Treasures, and other national programs that address long-term preservation. As everyone is acutely aware, the Obama admini-
LOYOLA UNIVERSITY RECEIVES NEH PRESERVATION GRANT

Loyola University-New Orleans received a Preservation Assistance Grant for Smaller Institutions in the amount of $5,000.00 from the National Endowment for the Humanities. The grant funded a preservation needs assessment of the Monroe Library's Special Collections and Archives. Preservation Assistance Grants for Smaller Institutions help small and mid-sized institutions, such as libraries, museums, historical societies, archival repositories, town and county records offices, and colleges, improve their ability to preserve and care for their humanities collections.

Awards of up to $5000 support preservation related collection assessments, consultations, training and workshops, and institutional and collaborative disaster and emergency planning. Grants cover consultant fees, workshop registration fees, related travel and per diem expenses, and the costs of purchasing and shipping preservation supplies and equipment. All applications to the NEH must be submitted through Grants.gov. See the application guidelines for details. The 2009 guidelines for Preservation Assistance Grants for Smaller Institutions are available at www.neh.gov/grants/guidelines/pag.html. You will also find sample project descriptions, sample narratives, and a list of frequently asked questions. The deadline for applications is May 14, 2009.

Small and mid-sized institutions that have never received an NEH grant are especially encouraged to apply. For more information, contact the staff of NEH’s Division of Preservation and Access at 202-606-8570 and preservation@neh.gov.

IMLS GRANT FUNDING SUPPORTS ARCHIVAL TRAINING COLLABORATIVE

The Institute for Library and Museum Services (IMLS), a federal funding agency, has granted LSU $280,000 to support a three-year effort to establish a sustainable program of archival training for staff and volunteers in historical repositories in the states of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama. In this Gulf-Coast region, historical repositories of all sizes depend in part, and in some cases completely, on the work of staff who have little or no formal training in the proper management of historical documents.

For the sake of its historical record, this region needs an organization dedicated to addressing the need for affordable training in the management of historical documents. The project, which calls itself the Archival Training Collaborative (ATC), began in July 2008 and runs through June 2011. During its first 18 months, the ATC will focus on arranging for and offering archival training opportunities in all three states. During the second half of the grant period, it will continue to offer archival training, but it will focus on developing the organizational and financial structures of one or more organizations that will continue to offer training opportunities after grant funding has ended.

Elizabeth H. Dow, Archives Educator in the School of Library and Information Science at LSU, will serve as Principal Investigator. Dow, Laura McLemore, Head of Archives and Special Collections, and the staff of NEH’s Division of Preservation and Access are available at preservation@neh.gov.

ELLENDER ARCHIVES Completes Claude B. Duval Processing Project

The Archives & Special Collections department at Nicholls State University has recently processed the papers of former Louisiana Senator, Claude B. Duval. A native of Houma, Duval graduated from Tulane University School of Law in New Orleans in 1937, and eventually became the senior partner in the law firm Duval, Arceaux, Lewis & Funderburk. Duval began his political career in 1956 as a candidate for state representative in the Louisiana Legislature. In addition to serving as campaign manager for Chep Morrison’s first bid for governor of Louisiana, Duval ran and lost a bid for lieutenant governor as Morrison’s running mate in the 1964 state elections. He subsequently served three terms as state senator from 1968-1980, during which time he spearheaded the renovation of the Louisiana State Capitol, creating Senate committee rooms and staff offices. Upon his retirement, the Senate honored him for his efforts in this project by passing Resolution No. 23 designating the Senate Committee Wing in the west basement of the Louisiana State Capitol as “Duval Hall.”

The collection covers 55 linear ft., spans 1822-1989, and is divided into two main groups: Claude B. Duval and Easton Family Papers. The Claude B. Duval Group primarily covers Duval’s political career, but

Registration has been busy in its first few months attempting to tackle the recession while simultaneously pushing one of the most ambitious policy packages in history. Only time will tell how this plays out, but the string of financial bailouts and restructuring of program entitlements will have profound implications for the archives and records professions. First off, it appears that unprecedented amounts of money will be spent on increasing internet bandwidth and connectivity, which should have a huge impact on government offices, schools, libraries, and other institutions that routinely deal with hybrid document formats. Secondly, part of the massive overhaul of the national health care system will involve the transition to electronic medical records, which will potentially impact every American citizen.

Thirdly, the restructuring of the financial system will likely usher in a new era of oversight, creating more complex relationships between government bureaucracies, public interests, and private enterprise. Obviously, the archives and records professions need to position themselves to effectively roll with whatever changes occur. Yet it appears that if reforms adhere to the administration’s vision, archives and records professionals should have plenty of opportunities to ply their trade.

The ATC expects the training opportunities to cost little enough that repositories or individual workers can afford to take them on a regular basis. The grant pays for the extraordinary costs of creating this project which includes support for the organizational meetings, publicity materials, administrative assistance, etc. It does not include funds for the cost of providing the training.

The ATC Steering Committee will develop a pricing structure based on the actual cost of presenting them, estimated in the proposal to IMLS as $20-$50 per participant. This need for archival training isn’t unique to Mid-Gulf Coast region; if successful, the ATC will develop a model that could very well apply to any region with similar needs. also includes some information on his personal life, law practice, and other business dealings. Material on his political career covers the different aspects of his campaigns along with his work in office. One of the more sensational aspects of Duval’s political papers consists of the Legislature’s investigation of Carlos Marcello and the Louisiana Mafia during the early 1970s. This includes a transcript of Marcello’s testimony before a special committee, reports to Governor McKeithen, and the adoption of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 31. The second group in this collection consists of materials from the Easton family who were related to Claude Duval through his paternal grandfather. It documents activities of various family members during the 1800s to early 1900s including correspondence, Civil War documents, German bank stock certificates, autograph albums, campaign speeches, notarial records, and essays on local history. The papers as well as funding for processing were generously donated to Nicholls by Duval’s daughter, Dorothy Duval Nelson of New Orleans. MEMBER NEWS: FLORENCE JUMONVILLE

Florence M. Jumonville, chair of the Louisiana and Special Collections Department at the Earl K. Long Library, University of New Orleans, has been named a member of the board of the Louisiana Library Foundation. She presented a paper, “Formerly the Property of a Lawyer’: Books that Shaped Louisiana Law,” at an international colloquium celebrating the bicentennial of the Louisiana Civil Code, which was held at Tulane University in November 2008. Florence also spoke on “Start the Presses!: An Overview of Early Printing in Louisiana” at the LSU Rural Life Museum’s Fifteenth Annual Ione E. Burden Symposium and on “Yesterday’s Lawsuit, Today’s History: Using the Archives of the Supreme Court of Louisiana in Research” at the Louisiana State Archives Genealogical Seminar, both in March 2009.

-Florence Jumonville
The Louisiana Historical Records Advisory Board met January 26, 2009 at the State Archives Auditorium to discuss ways of implementing the priorities established in the Strategic Plan. Louisiana State Archivist, Dr. Florent Hardy, opened the meeting with a description of some of the ongoing projects at the State Archives, including the successful Louisiana Archives Roadshow events, a recently-produced Archives orientation video, a new “Friends of the State Archives” group, and different maintenance efforts at the state archives building and storage units.

The gathering of board members Hardy, Faye Phillips, Dr. Bruce Turner, Johnny Crain, and Frank Borne and approximately twenty other archives and records professionals from across the state discussed the improvement of government- mental recordkeeping and public education as major priorities. It was agreed that LHRAB in cooperation with LAMA and the State Archives will assemble regional teams of LAMA members and other willing, professional archivists (aided by students whenever possible) to amass a general inventory and condition report of Clerks of Court/Parish Council records in all 64 parishes.

This general inventory will lay the groundwork for a number of LHRAB goals. It will provide a structure by which LHRAB can begin to interact with Clerks of Court and other record-holding politicians in a helpful and non-threatening manner. Records officials at the local level would be less likely to argue with state-sponsored volunteerism that costs them nothing and will ultimately free up time, money, and storage space for their individual offices. It will also provide concrete information on just how bad the situation is in many parishes. This information can then be leveraged into action in the Legislature.

The inventory will likely follow the model of other states and potentially lead to the creation of regional record centers for the oldest and most vulnerable historical records. If not removed, records would be scanned and/or microfilmed. Individual parishes would still ‘own’ the originals, but said originals would be housed properly, out of harm’s way, in the aforementioned record centers. The cutoff date for records to be removed to safer storage has yet to be determined; likely the cutoff will be sometime between 1812 and 1865. Other criteria for removal will need to be evaluated as well; if records are already housed safely and the facilities are deemed “archivally sound” there may be no need to remove them to a different records center.

The inventory will also help out with another LHRAB objective: to create a finding aid website that incorporates all Louisiana repositories. Such a website will initially be a list of links to the various repositories that already have websites with finding aids posted on them. Ultimately it will become a large database that can be accessed and updated by institutional members at their leisure.

Lee Leumas and Carrie Fager volunteered to organize personnel on the inventory project, possibly starting in the eight New Orleans metro-area parishes. The inventory teams will donate their time and expertise, although it is hoped and planned that the State will subsidize the effort by paying all or at least part of travel and housing expenses. The Secretary of State will be approached for funding as the project plan develops.

The problem of many or most of these records offices not being accessible on weekends was not broached, so LAMA volunteers will either have to obtain special access to the records or take time off...
IN LETTER TO PRESIDENT OBAMA ARCHIVES, RECORDS, AND HISTORY ORGANIZATIONS SET OUT CRITERIA FOR NEW UNITED STATES ARCHIVIST

Upon the resignation of Dr. Allen Weinstein as the Archivist of the United States on December 19, 2008, more than 60 history- and archives-related member organizations signed a letter to president-elect Obama sharing their thoughts regarding the qualifications deemed essential for the next appointee.

Referring to part of a speech where Obama said, “Our stories are singular, but our destiny is shared,” the letter stated: “Our stories are preserved and our destiny is recorded in the archives of the United States. It is within the archives that we document our democracy, our liberty, our opportunities and, most importantly, the hope of our nation’s people. The Archivist of the United States is among the most senior individuals in the archives profession. He or she is invested with many legal obligations, but perhaps most importantly with the moral responsibility to see that this great mission of preserving and remembering our nation’s history is accomplished in a way from which our citizens can and will learn.”

The entire text of the letter and an accompanying list of criteria can be found at http://www.statearchivists.org/news/2008-12-19-LtrrReAUS.htm.

from their own jobs to do this. However, the condition reports will be minimal so they should not require an inordinate amount of time to complete. Reports will utilize standardized condition check-lists for all teams in all parishes. It was indicated that some parishes have already done inventories and/or condition reports but many of these may be out-of-date by now.

More information about the LHRAB inventory project (and related projects) will be distributed to LAMA members as it becomes available. Those interested in volunteering please contact Trish Nugent, Carrie Fager, or Lee Leumas. For more on LHRAB go to: http://www.sos.louisiana.gov/tabid/80/Default.aspx.

The Louisiana Archives and Manuscripts Association promotes the role of archives in the preservation of our national, state, and local heritage by cooperating with Louisiana’s public and private archival repositories in their work of collecting, conserving, and making accessible to the public manuscript, printed, graphic arts, and audio materials of historical significance. In 2009 LAMA currently has 43 dues paying members compared to 72 in 2008. There are now 23 individual members while in 2008 there were 41. There are 3 organization members who have paid memberships for 12 individuals while in 2008 there were 10 organizations who paid memberships for 21 individuals. In 2008 there were 6 student members while in 2009 there are 5. In 2008 there were 4 senior members while in 2009 there are 3. The only category reversing this trend is sustaining membership. In 2009 there is 1 while in 2008 there were none. The LAMA membership year is from 1 December to 30 November. Reminders will soon be sent to those who paid dues in 2008 but have not yet paid for 2009. If you want to pay before receiving the reminder, the printable membership registration form can be found on the LAMA website [http://louisianaarchivists.org] - click on Joining LAMA. Please encourage people in your area who work with historical records to consider joining the organization. -Bruce Turner, LAMA Treasurer
LAMA offers the following membership categories:

- Student $5.00
- Senior Citizen $15.00
- Individual $10.00
